Market Relief?

By Clay Calvert and Robert D. Richards

A s the media spotlight follows what is, for the moment, a high-profile student speech case, the scenario at issue in the Bong Hits 4 Jesus case of scenario at issue in the "Bong Hits 4 Jesus" case is part of a larger, more common situation that will arise before the U.S. Supreme Court to tackle a student speech case. In 2004, the Supreme Court issued a ruling in the Morse v. Frederick case, holding that public school officials had the authority to prohibit student speech that could reasonably be interpreted as promoting illegal drug use.

In par-