

My interest in sports journalism and sports communications has grown through my experiences at Penn State. As a Broadcast Journalism major, I have become increasingly involved in sports media through PSNtv and Comm Radio, where I have gained experience writing, producing, and discussing sports content. I contribute to sports programming, including “360 Sports,” which has helped me develop my on-air presence, storytelling, and communication skills. I am also involved with “Coast to Coast,” a sports trivia talk show where I collaborate with other students to create engaging content for listeners. Beyond broadcasting, I am interested in sports photography, social media, public relations, and event coverage. I hope to continue building experience in these areas at Penn State while connecting with professionals and other students in the industry. My goal is to combine my passion for sports and communication into a career in sports media, journalism, or communications.
