Dear Catie Grant,

My name is Isabel Najjar, and I'm a freshman in the Film/Video major. I'm applying primarily for a videography or editing position at CommAgency, but would frankly be very interested to try out any available roles in the company.

Despite not having much in-class experience, I've spent my first year at Penn State actively seeking out opportunities to learn production hands-on. Already, I've helped out as a production assistant on two student films, and am an active member of the Student Film Organization. I was thrilled when I learned about CommAgency, where I'd be able to work more consistently to really broaden my expertise. I'm eager not only to gain more experience with video production, but to build the skills it takes to work with professional clients, something I've never had the opportunity to do before.

As a student in the Schreyer Honors College, I am accustomed to handling heavy workloads and prioritizing my responsibilities effectively to consistently meet deadlines-- I'm confident that I have the time management skills to excel in a position at CommAgency. Before I began at Penn State last Fall, I lived abroad in West Africa for 7 months. Though on paper this experience may seem unrelated to my studies and my interest in CommAgency, those seven months taught me a great deal about effective communication and adaptability, two skills that are crucial to the process of any kind of media production.

Above all, my greatest asset is my willingness and drive to learn. I know that the best way to build skills is through doing, and I am eager to make the most of my time at Penn State by being as involved as possible. Should I be offered a position at CommAgency, you can be sure that I will be fully dedicated to mastering the skills I will need to succeed.

Respectfully,
Isabel Najjar
