

Norah Martin

To me, an internship is one of the most crucial ways to learn about any industry that one desires to pursue. I believe that, especially for Public Relations, getting hands-on experience is so important to really understand the work that is done in this profession. I want to not only learn what skills are needed in a professional setting, but also be able to develop them and efficiently maximize my work and time. The best way to develop any skill is to put it into practice. I hope to find myself in an agency job post-graduate, having the suitable skills and experience that my internship(s) prepared me with.