Throughout my life, I have always been told that I am a very ambitious girl. My friends, teachers and guidance counselors throughout high school described me as someone who knew what she wanted, but constantly took on too much. I graduated as the valedictorian with a 4.5 GPA after taking thirteen college level courses, I spent all four years as the captain of our color guard squad in the high school marching band and winter guard, and I was active in the National Honors Society. I have always been told I was determined yet “doing too much.”

As I make my way through my time with the Pennsylvania State Donald P. Bellisario College of Communications, my ambitions run even higher than they had when I was in high school. The university provides me with a plentiful of opportunities to give me the experiences to benefit my future. I spend my time with award winning publication groups on campus that teach me the proper writing style for journalists and how to use social media to promote content. Truly, I am among the best of the best which is the only place for a girl as ambitious as myself.

I have been told that I take on too many things at once and I should slow down. Yet, I have no hopes of slowing down. I wish to take my career even faster. Journalism is my passion and I will stop at nothing to get an opportunity that will further strengthen my future.

To gain a fall internship with CommAgency would allow me the chance to take my life even further. It would be an opportunity I could never forget while being able to learn more about the campus I'm lucky to call my home. I feel that Penn State is one of the best places for a communications major to be, and so I am excited for a potential chance to work hands on with those who make the university run.

Thank you for reviewing my application, and I look forward to hearing from you soon. I can be contacted at 804-867-7971 or jmc7727@psu.edu.

Sincerely,
