

COMMUNICATIONS 496H Application for Honors Independent Study

PURPOSE AND GUIDELINES:

COMM 496H credits are available for students in the Schreyer Honors College who are working on an honors thesis. Students may apply for up to six credits of COMM 496H. These credits are most commonly distributed over two semesters.

The honors thesis may take the form of a scholarly project involving the examination of some aspect of the field of communications, or the thesis may involve the production of a professional project. In either case, the student must work closely with both the thesis supervisor and honors advisor to ensure the project is within College of Communications norms about what constitutes thesis work.

Students may not register for COMM 496H until all parties listed below (in Parts 3 and 4) have approved the application. Once approved, the student will be registered for COMM 496H credits by the College of Communications staff. To complete this process in a timely fashion, students should meet with their thesis and honors advisors early in the process. Students should expect that the project description, timeline and other parts of this application may need to be revised several times before the application is approved. An approved application MUST be on file with the College of Communications office no later than the end of the regular Add-Drop period of the semester in which the credits will be taken.

Questions about this form, or the application process, should be directed to the student's honors advisor or to the College of Communications Honors Coordinator (Prof. Jo Dumas, jad21@psu.edu).
